Excerpt from Shel Silverstein's The Giving Tree:

"And after years the boy came back, both of them were old.

'I really cannot help you if you ask for another gift. I'm nothing, but an old stump now. I'm sorry, but I've nothing more to give.'

'I do not need very much now, just a quiet place to rest,' the boy whispered, with a weary smile.

'Well,' said the tree, 'An old stump is still good for that.

Come, boy,' she said, 'Sit down, sit down and rest a while.'

Jeremy Entwistle

I'd first like to thank you for bothering to read this. To me, Sacred Heart has been entirely worth it, because through all the Science Fairs, the Spanish presentations, the unfair grades, the Saturday morning basketball practices, the social drama, that queasy feeling you get before sports, and the ...people, there have been the good grades, the basketball, soccer, and track and field wins, the social successes, the science....well, never mind, and, by far most importantly, the people who I truly enjoyed being with. No "shout outs." You know who you are. Oh, and thanks, Mom and Dad...and Jonathan.

Thanks to my Mom, Dad, and sister; you guys have always been there for me whenever I've needed it. Thanks to everyone in the Class of 2007, you guys are what define friends. We have had the greatest four years of our lives making memories and forging friendships. Sadly that time is over and we are going to carry the memories into the future together.....we will never forget.

I have decided to follow the cliché of thanking my parents, because if I didn't, I'd feel I had left out two people who always gave me encouragement, trust, advice, and love. I must also emphasize the importance of having friends. Not until high school started did I realize how important they were. Some people became my friends who, until high school, I had barely talked too, and my only regret is not making their acquaintances sooner. One girl in particular makes me feel like the luckiest guy ever, and I couldn't be happier.

Members of the intermediate school gathered in the lower gymnasium in the spring of 2007 for the annual academic fair, showcasing myriad projects that dealt with such diverse topics as the arctic and animal rights to a history of the band Metallica and autism.

One of the standout projects (literally) was a large windmill constructed by eighth graders Annie Faiella and Jennifer Mobilia as part of their analysis of wind propellers.

The 2007 winners included eighth graders Susannah Tuminielli, Nathaniel Moore, and Nicholas Aylward.

SCIENCE FAIR

In February 2007, Sacred Heart's annual science fair produced a variety of experiments that ranged from the interesting to the bizarre.

Students transformed the lower gymnasium into a laboratory, offering a wide array of experiments on everything from the effect of color on memory to nitrates in rivers to motor oil.

As in past years, a combination of faculty members, parents, and alumni were on hand to view the exhibits and choose the winners. Top projects included one on wind turbines by eighth grader Susannah Tuminelli; one on the effect of light by eighth graders Pam Anderson and Molly Dinardo; an examination of the cleanliness of restaurants by freshman Meiling May; and the viscosity of motor oil by seniors Molly Keenan and Tim Wolfe.

Art

In the spring of 2007, Sacred Heart students took part in The Memory Project, a nationwide art effort that celebrated orphans from Bolivia. Students received photographs of children and then crafted portraits. The resulting works were showcased in a local exhibit before being sent to the villages where the children live.

Senior Jessica Judge received a picture of Yecenia (above) before beginning work on her portrait in conjunction with art teacher Mrs. Evelyn Dunbar (center). After weeks of work, Jessica's completed work, as well as the work of 14 fellow students, was ready for exhibition (bottom).

The project was one of many art efforts throughout the school year, which included numerous awards on the local, regional and national level, including senior Tim Wolfe's piece, Quantum Yoga, which went on to win first place in the 10th Congressional District art competition, and was sent to Washington, D.C. to be exhibited.

2007

FIELD Trips

Field trips provide a unique learning experience that often cannot be duplicated in the classroom. Sacred Heart students took advantage of myriad trips during the 2006-2007 school year.

These included (clockwise from upper left) an examination of giant turtles at the New England Aquarium in Boston; a three-day excursion to Columbia University as part of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association's annual newspaper conference; a trip to historic Fanuel Hall in the heart of Boston; and a trip by juniors to the historic Old Manse, located in Concord.

After School

Academic activities do not always involve books and classes. Plenty of excitement takes place during the after school hours at Sacred Heart, with everything from Uno (top) to chess (right) and rehearsals (above), Sacred Heart is almost as busy after the last bell rings as it is during the school day.

Joann and Sean O'Brien

Joann and Sean Congratulations!

As twins, you have a unique and special bond.

You grew up together and learned to care for and support each other.

But you are individuals,
each with your own interests and passions.
We relish your differences and embrace your goals.

Joann

We are blessed to have you as our daughter. You should be as proud
of all your accomplishments
as we are. Your future is bright, and may you realize all of your dreams.

Sean

Having you as our son has been a joy.
We are so proud of who you are and what you have accomplished. May you continue on
your chosen path
and find happiness
and success.

I hope you never fear those mountains in the distance.
Never settle for the path of least resistance.
And when you get the choice to sit it out or dance,
I hope you dance.

Jennifer Price

Jennifer Marie Price,

Few people (if any) could fathom, comprehend or understand how much I love you and have loved you since, well, my birth. Again, few people (if any) could have a sister as talented, as beautiful, and as great a role model as I've been lucky enough to possess through my childhood and adolescence. As you pass into adulthood, spare a thought on your little brother, for you can be certain he shall be thinking of you.

I love you.

Alex

Queenie,

You started out as our little Princess, and after a year, you became our Queen, and to this day you have remained our Queenie.

We have all been through so much together, and apart, but one thing we have learned is through everything it has only made us stronger and love each other more. We are a great family, blessed in so many ways, and will always be together, no matter where everyone winds up.

The memories and times that we have shared are way too abundant to express, but will always be in your dad, brother, and my hearts.

We look forward to watching your continued growth and want you to know how very proud we are of you!
